It was dinnertime. The father was wondering where his son was because his son was not sitting at the kitchen table. The father went to another room and discovered that his son was reading a book there. As his son left the room, the father looked down at the book that his son had been reading. At the kitchen table, the mother and son wondered where the father had gone. The mother sent her son to look for his father. The son then walked into the room where he had been earlier. Finally, he angrily noticed that his father was reading the same book that the son had been reading earlier.
