I think traditional local arts and crafts should be shared worldwide. Each prefecture in Japan has its own unique ones. For example, Kochi Prefecture has Tosa washi paper, and I want to recommend it. First, it is eco-friendly because it is made from the kozo plant. Second, Tosa washi is strong, light, and beautiful, so it can be used in many ways, such as wrapping gifts, folding origami, and making lampshades. In our fast-paced digital society, making things by hand can help people slow down and relax. That is why I want to share Japanese local arts and crafts worldwide.      (100 words)
