解答例 (賛成)

I agree that blind people should not travel if proper support is not provided. Traveling can be dangerous when clear guidance, safe transportation, and trained partners are not available. Without these conditions, blind travelers may feel stressed rather than enjoy the trip. Although travel programs like Traveleyes help, such support is not always guaranteed, so avoiding travel can sometimes be a safer choice. (63 words)

解答例 (反対)

I disagree with the idea that blind people should not travel. Traveling allows blind people to explore new places and enjoy different cultures in their own way. They can experience the world through sounds, smells, and textures, which can make each trip meaningful. Because travel offers valuable opportunities for learning and meeting new people, blind people should be encouraged to travel.
